Freedom Traditional Plan

It's probably safe to assume that most employers would purchase a major medical benefits plan for their employees if they could afford it. The Freedom Traditional Plan is an affordable major medical option – plus members can go to any provider for services.

Here's how it works:

- Benefits are similar to a traditional health insurance plan and includes access to telehealth professionals.
- The only out-of-pocket expenses are copays, deductibles and coinsurance (no balance billing!).
- There is no network, but members still receive PPO-like discounts because reimbursement to providers is reference-based on a multiple of Medicare allowed prices.
- Allied provides no-cost legal support for members who have been balance billed and are being pressured for payment. Once members inform Allied, Allied handles the issue for them.

You can learn more about our Freedom Traditional Plan in our product brochure.

Telehealth Video — A Great Sales Tool

When you are meeting with prospective employers, don't forget to use some of Allied's great short videos to help explain our plans and make your sale easier.

A great benefit of our Funding Advantage health plans is the 24/7 access to telehealth. Telehealth is a free benefit to many of our Funding Advantage members. Members can access medical advice by cell phone, computer, or tablet from anywhere for minor health issues. The cost of the consultation is covered by their Allied health plan.

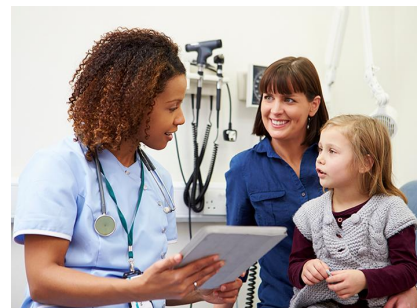

Here is a great short video to share with employers on how telehealth works.
